

Deacon Tony's June 12, 2022 Homily
for
TRINITY SUNDAY

The Father who sought me
The Son who bought me
The Holy Spirit who taught me.

Each person of the Trinity has a love for each other and a love for each of us. This loving relationship sets the tone for how we are to live. The Trinity is the best example for us to form our families, built on love, and made to last forever. It seems that this covenant love goes back to first created being, Adam.

After that first covenant was broken, Adam went into hiding.

WHERE ARE YOU? I WAS AFRAID.

From the beginning of time, we try to fix things ourselves by hiding and hoping it goes away. But the Father seeks us to be honest about our sins and deal with them honestly.

From our baptism our sins are washed clean, and we are born into a new life that is free of sin. Only God could make up for Adam's breaking of the Covenant, which He did through Jesus' sacrifice on the cross.

With the love between the Father and the Son and the love they had for creation; we have the finest example of sacrifice in order to bring our world in line with God's kingdom.

Paul reminds us that through Christ's sacrifice we now have access to the grace of God, in which we operate through the prompting of the Holy Spirit. We live in the light of God in order to stay on His path to peace and harmony.

So, we see how each person in the Blessed Trinity has a role in our lives to get us home in peace.

It is all done with the motivation of love which we first received in the waters of Baptism. We are set on our way with the protection of the anointing of the Holy Oils. We have a mission to "BE CHRIST TO OTHERS" by taking up the white garment of Christ, while walking in His light.

It is a three-part job cooperation, but God feels that we are worth the effort. Thank you, Father, Son and Holy Spirit.

And thank you to our parents, grandparents and all who brought us up in the faith.
